

John is a doctor; he is a veterinarian. More specifically he doesn't work with dogs and cats like in Dr. Dolittle, John works with badass animals like lions and tigers and bears, oh my. Every day the animals crack wise jokes about John, even when he is around. Of course he can't understand what they were saying until one day when John's marriage ended. He went to work drunk and could hear the animals talking about him, but not only could he hear what they were saying; they would obey his every command.

Enraged that the animals were making fun of him, he reached his hand out and the very air around him to become pressurized and suck the life out of Caesar, the king ape in the lab (not from Planet of the Apes). Drunk with the power, he set free the animals as his army, killing anybody that got or will get in his way. John will not stop, challenging every hero out there. Chasing after the one that mattered most to him, just to feel love's touch again.
